

S. DICKSON (1903)

"The Immortal Memory" was submitted Mr Dickson. Robert Burns, he said, was better at his worst than the majority of his critics and biographers were at their best.

To all true Scotsmen what songs could compare with the sons of Burns? The song—writer lived in the heart of the people, and for him alone was reserved the crown of immortality.